Goucher Co-Eds Get by With $135 For Year's Clothes

Baltimore, Nov. 30 (AP)—You have the word of Goucher college students that today's co-ed can get by on $135 per year for clothes—and, if papa spends more than $1,400 a year to keep darling daughter respectable, it's "just waste".

The figures are a practical answer to the question: What does it cost to clothe a co-ed?

A group of students measured the wardrobe outflow from their handbags in a clothing-budget research project. Results: A girl can dress "adequately" on an average of $135 for her four college years.

She can dress "liberally" on $334.88. And no queen can touch her for $1,400. That buys all this and the "heavenly," too, and there's no point in spending more.

In the $334.88 "liberal" budget, they reported, the main item is $69.50 for dresses. Coats and jackets cost $55.03. Cleaning and repairing bills of $42.25 were the third largest expenditure.

Those hats cost $14. Other costs were: footwear, $30.90; suits, $13.33; blouses and skirts, $5.62; skirts and pinafors, $6.68; sweaters, $8.75; sportswear for riding, tennis, swimming, etc., $22.20; undergarments and lounging clothes, $28.75; accessories, $17.97.

That's average expense, they explained, with any item's cost divided by its length of life. An $80 coat lasting four years means $20 a year. It's supposed to last four years. Well... that's what the girls said.

Old Horsehide Trunk, Once Owned by Peter Little, Founder of Littlestown, Now Owned by 6th Generation Descendant, Walter Crapster, Taneytown

In an attic, matchless for cleanliness, of a small brick home on Baltimore street, Taneytown, is an old wooden trunk, whose horsehide cover is badly torn, showing signs of long, hard wear. From outward appearance and at first glance one would suspect the trunk of being of old vintage but of little or no value; perhaps the product of a craftsman of the old school before modern machines and tools made possible the manufacturers of such articles in a far more attractive state.

Early Trunk of Peter Little, Founder of Littlestown.

But this old trunk is the relic of the handiwork of man of more than one hundred and seventy-five years ago and it so happens that it was originally the property of the late Peter Klein, later known as Peter Little, founder of the borough of Littlestown. It is now the property of the Walter Crapster family, six generations removed from its first owner.

The trunk itself is not the least bit attractive and its pecuniary worth is not to be compared with the sentimental value to its present owners.

It was built of thin pieces of wood bearing the appearance of our present day laminated stock. It is approximately three feet long by two feet wide and two feet high. It is covered with horsehide, badly torn and worn. It has brass corner plates, a hinged top and a brass plate in the center of the top upon which is engraved "Susan Crapster, Taneytown." Susan (Little) Crapster was a daughter of Peter Little, and a great-great-great-grandmother of the present owner of the trunk.

Peter Little, sometimes known as Peter Klein, founded the village of Littlestown in 1765.

In 1727 warrants were issued by Maryland authorities for a tract of 6,823 acres to John Diggs embracing Conewago and part of German townships, which were then part of Lancaster county, but supposed to be in the county of Baltimore, Maryland.

Martin Hauser took out warrants in 1741 and 1743 and afterwards assigned them to Peter Little to whom a patent for 311 acres was granted by the Penns on September 18, 1760. Five years later, in 1765, Peter Little laid out the town comprising 57 lots, each with a 66 foot frontage and a depth of 264 feet each. Purchasers of these lots were pledged to build a "substantial dwelling house on each lot, at least 18-foot square, within three years."

Little information is available about the life and activities of Peter Little, son of Ludwig Little or Ludwig Klein who was born in Switzerland or Germany and who emigrated to Pennsylvania, first going to Philadelphia and thence to the Littlestown area. Ludwig Little died in 1786.

Peter Little was born on January 27, 1724, and died April 7, 1773, in his forty-ninth year. The borough of Littlestown had several names prior to its present name. It was known as "Kleina Stadte," "Kleina-staedel," "Petersburg," "Peter's Town," "Peter Little's Town," "Kleinstown," and Littlestown.

Peter Little was the father of nine children: Barbara, Michael, Catharine, Mary, Elizabeth, Susanna, Ludwig, Joseph and Peter.

Some of the original lot owners of the community were Peter Cushman, Matthias Baker, Stephen Geiss, Henry Brothers, R. McIlhenny, Jacob Gray, John Alspach, Michael Reed, Peter Baker, the Wills, Sells, Hostettlers, Stables, Crouses, Longs, Dysarts, Littles and the Kuntz families.

Citizens Vote for Borough The movement for the incorporation of Littlestown as a borough began August 20, 1860, with the filing of petitions for papers of incorporation. This was followed by remonstrances and exceptions and finally by an election of its citizens, decreed by the court which resulted in a majority of 14 favoring the establishment of a borough. The vote was 34 favoring and 28 against.

Peter Little had stated that he wanted the community always to be called Petersburg but it was not to be and succeeding years brought the various changes in its name.

Its Population Was Then 250 In 1797 the settlement contained 80 homes. Its population was then 250. Its popularity increased and its importance as a growing community was enhanced considerably from 1807 to 1814 when the Gettysburg-Petersburg turnpike road was constructed. It became an important stop for stages and wagons operating between Baltimore and Pittsburgh and high hopes were held for a large, prosperous and thriving community.

Hotel Used As Hospital The war of 1861-65 brought it additional recognition. General Daniel E. Sickles was removed to Littlestown after he had been wounded in the Battle of Gettysburg and suffered the amputation of a leg. From Littlestown, he was transferred to Baltimore.

Colonel W. W. Dudley, later U. S. Pension Commissioner, was also wounded at Gettysburg and he was removed to Littlestown where he had a leg amputated at the home of Ephraim Myers by Dr. Thomas Kimzer. The National hotel, at Littlestown, was used as a hospital and General Geary used the William McSherry estate as a camping ground while his staff used the McSherry residence for command headquarters.

Some histories, citing no authority for the statement, claim that "fences were burned, crops destroyed and fields cut up and damaged" during the war between the states.

In May, 1781, General Wayne and his command camped at Littlestown en route to meet Cornwallis.

Littlestown today is a thriving community housing shoe and clothing factories, canning plants, wood-working mills, etc. Its citizens are energetic and progressive and take pride in their fine, clean community.

Descendants of Founder The present owners of the trunk trace their ancestry from Peter Little as follows:

Peter Little married Ursula Shriver. One daughter, Susan Little, married John Crapster, Sr. A son of this union, Basil Crapster, married Alice Maria Patterson.
