General Variety.

MARSEILLES, June 29, 1833.

NAPOLEON.—At the time in which the Place Vendome is about to receive anew the statue of this great man, it appears interesting to us to present the following table of a life to which there is no resemblance in that of any other person.

Napoleon born Aug. 15, 1769 Entered the school at Brienne Feb. 6, 1792 Passed to that of Paris 1793 Lieut. in the 1st of Artillery at La Fore,

Sep. 1, 1795 Major Oct. 19, 1793 General of Brigade Feb. 6, 1794 General of Division Oct. 16, 1795 General in Chief of the Army of Italy,

Feb. 23, 1796 Consul for Life Aug. 2, 1802 Emperor May 18, 1803 Crowned Dec. 2, 1804 First Abdication at Fontainebleau, April 11, 1814 Mounts the throne again March 20, 1815 Second Abdication June 22, 1815 Landed at St. Helena Oct. 16, 1815 Died May 5, 1821

CHARLESTOWN, (Va.) Sept. 12.

Our millers, this year, have a hard task of it;—The crops of grain, which at one time seemed to be prosperous, fell much short of its usual quantity, and is by no means of as good quality as formerly.

Much of it is blighted, and cockle is abundant. It is impossible therefore that our millers can keep up the character of their mills or of the country, with such grain.

The flour cannot be made as white as usual. This being the case, we may hope that our Eastern friends will not hereafter be so rigid in their inspection—because, to require this year, Flour to come up to the standard of past years, is requiring an impossibility.

Very great injury will be inflicted upon both millers and farmers, unless due allowance be made for the circumstances we have stated.

Downing Correspondence.

To Mr. Dwight.—Daily Advertiser.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5, 1833. My good old friend—Since I wrote to you last we have seen so much said in the papers about money being scarce in York, and other places north, some saying it is all owing to "Squire Biddle, and some to "Zekel Bigelow, and some to "the Government"—that the General wants me to go right off and look into it, and put it to rights, for the General says if there is any ailing in money in one place, it will spread just like the Cholera Morbus, and if it gets to Washington, we shall be in a bad way, for right upon all on em here cant stand much of a squeeze. The General says he don't want to have any thing secret about it, and that I must write to him through the papers, for then all our folks can read it at once, and wont pester him about it.

I start to-morrow morning a day light. I'll stop a day or so in Philadelphia, and see how things go on there, and then look into York. If I can only get a fair talk with some of them are folks in Wall street, I'll git to the bottom of it in a minute.

I know there is money enough somewhere—folks dont eat it—and what the General wants me to find out is, where the money is, and what on earth is the reason folks cant get it when they want it.

Your friend,

J. DOWNING, Major, Downingville Militia, 2d Drigade.

To Mr. Dwight—Editor of the York Daily Adv.

PHILADELPHIA, 11 Sept. 1833.

My Good old Friend—I send you a letter I write to the General last night—he told me to write to him threw the papers. Some of the printers here wanted me to give them the print on em, but if I let any body but you print em first, folks cant tell which is genuine—some fellows write so much like me, that I am stumped some times myself, and put to 't as bad as Captain Jumper, of the 2 Pollies, and President of the Downingville Bank
